

TWO BOYS DIE TO SAVE PARENTS' WOE

Youths Executed at Own Request Three Days Earlier Than Necessary.

FATHER SEES ONE PASS

Young Murderers' Hope to Save Their Families Sorrow of Christmas Funeral.

OSSINING, N. Y., Dec. 19.—Stanley Millstein, nineteen, and Charles Kumrow, twenty, gave up three days of life in which something might have intervened to save them that they might spare their families the sorrow of Christmas funerals, and went calmly to their deaths in the electric chairs here at dawn today.

Their execution was set for Friday. They asked to be permitted to die today.

Millstein was the youngest prisoner ever sent to death in Sing Sing. The new warden, William H. Moyer, saying it was his grim duty under the law, witnessed the execution. Former Warden Osborne and former Acting Warden Kirchwey always left the prison on these occasions.

Father Outside.
Out in the prison office, unknown to Kumrow, his father sat from 3 o'clock in the morning until after his son's execution. The elder Kumrow had traveled all day and all night in a day coach from Buffalo in hope of seeing his son before he died. This privilege the prison authorities denied.

The old man sat silent among the official witnesses, waiting in the warden's office until the hour of the execution. He watched them pass out in single file behind the dapper little executioner, and the tall white-haired keeper of the death house.

His eyes followed them out the door grimly, but he said nothing. He was sitting in the same position they had left him when the little group returned.

Only Speaks Once.
Only once in his lonely vigil from 3 o'clock until the hour of death did the boy's father speak, and then it was to utter a plea that he be permitted to see his son.

"I just want to see him for a minute. Just for a minute," he begged.

"His mother is nearly crazy over this and I can't just let her go back to her without some word from him," the guard was sorry, but his orders were from the warden and he could do nothing.

Death Party Comes In.
It was precisely 5:15 when the witnesses walked into the death chamber and took their seats on the rough pine benches. At 5:36 the guard stationed between the gaping chair and the little gray door, snapped his fingers at his waiting assistant.

The sounds from the corridor beckoned the arrival of the death party between the cell tiers of the condemned.

A boy's voice called out: "Good-by, everybody," and young Millstein stepped into the death chamber. Behind him came Father Cashin, toting the prayers for the little boy who, Millstein made calm and ready response.

Pleading Vainly.
A tall, black-haired boy, with even pleasing features, he did not appear to be more than eighteen years old. He glanced quickly at each person in the bare little room as he sat down and extended his arms and legs for the attendants to fit the straps and electrodes.

Kissing the crucifix grasped in his hand he suffered the electric helmet to be fitted over his head and his face masked in black leather.

At 5:38 the little electrician, in full view of the witnesses, shoved home the clutch and sent the charge of death through the wires into the praying boy's body.

The doctors pronounced the man dead at 6:04 a. m.

Father Cashin returned through the little gray door for Kumrow, who died at 6:13 a. m.

Footish Kids.
"They were just a couple of footish kids," said Father Cashin. "Kumrow killed a tough captain in Buffalo and Millstein killed a policeman in Utica. Both were moments dearly paid for. They were fully prepared to die and both had asked forgiveness from any whom they may have offended in heaven and on earth. I only hope that my death will be as happy as theirs."

SMOKES TO SPITE HUSBAND.
PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 19.—Mrs. Margaret Wilda, thirty-eight years old, was arrested when a policeman saw her smoking a cigarette in the street. The policeman told Mrs. Wilda her act was a breach of the peace. She refused to put the cigarette out and was held in jail overnight. She told Magistrate Tracey she quarreled with her husband and smoked on the street "for spite." The magistrate discharged her.

ASKS QUESTION, IS SHOT.
CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—Policeman Edward J. Mulvihill was shot and fatally wounded by a man he had stopped to question on his beat in the Italian district, where there have been nearly a dozen murders in the last few weeks.

OVERSHOES SOAR.
WATERBURY, Conn., Dec. 19.—Rubber overshoes of all kinds and shoes with rubber soles were jumped 30 per cent in price because of unusual demand and shortage of labor it has been announced by factories here.

GIRLS IN TRENCHES OF XMAS SHOPPING

They Make a Few Suggestions to Last Minute Purchasers About Co-operation.

Think of the person behind the counter when you do your Christmas shopping, and you will accomplish that difficult task much more quickly, according to a score of department store clerks interviewed on the subject of "shoppers."

"The trouble with most people who do their Christmas shopping," said one tired-looking little girl, "is that they consider us as machines and nothing more. They don't realize that we are having as hard a time as they are, if not harder."

Others Think Same Way.
And this sentiment was expressed by many others. People are being very considerate this year, some stated, in doing their shopping early, but many haven't gotten over the idea that clerks are made to be taken out of the way of one young man, when the shopper can't find what he's looking for.

"What I hate," said another girl, "is a lady who looks at me through her lorgnette in an withering way and says, 'How nice! How nice!' because I can't tell her what sort of gloves her fifteen-year-old daughter will like best. I can tell her, too, and believe I am right, but she won't believe anything I say."

"What sort of a shopper do you hate worst?" several were asked.

The majority of answers were that the woman, it's mostly a woman, who asks to be shown everything in the show case, demands the price, handles all of them, and passes deleterious comments at the same time, and then sees a friend and leaves without so much as a word, draws the hate of a tired clerk upon her head. These are said to say, "pleasure," according to the clerks.

"People don't realize that Christmas means to us just a lot of added work and worry," said a glove counter clerk, "and that we are nearly as tired in the morning as at night. If you don't believe it, try standing behind a counter all day long and trying to fit gloves on every sort of hand in the world. If a lady can't find what she wants, it's all right, but it is as little as she can do to say 'Thank you' when she leaves. And we remember her, too. There are so few of them that they are always welcomed with open arms the next time they come our way."

AID ASKED FOR PEACE WIDOWS

Associated Charities Reminds Washington That Sufferers Aren't All Abroad.

Associated Charities to station a representative at the shop at that time to receive the proceeds.

Contributions will be received at the Social Service House, 923 H street, or at the Times office, and forwarded to the Associated Charities.

List of Opportunities.
Here are the fourteen opportunities for people of Washington to relieve some suffering families and to help provide a happier Christmas for some of the city's unfortunate.

Needs $12 Weekly.
1.—A widow needs $12 a week to keep a home for two boys and two girls. When she was bereaved the boys were sent to an orphan asylum. Separation was proving disastrous. With help they can be kept home.
